

BACKGROUND

Violent extremism (VE) has posed a heightened threat to Kenya since the late 1990s, when Al-Qaeda bombed the United States Embassy in Nairobi. Whilst larger attacks have occurred less regularly in recent years, there remain frequent smaller-scale incidents and attacks in Coastal and North-Eastern Kenya.

Kenya became a GCERF partner country* in 2018. To date, GCERF has invested USD 13 million in the country, with active grants worth USD 3.4 million currently supporting three consortiums of local civil society organisations (CSOs). This investment supports civil society's active involvement in implementing the National Strategy to Prevent and Counter Violent Extremism (NSPCVE) and County Action Plans (CAPs).

GCERF pioneers a unique model of investment designed to promote a whole-of-society approach and ensure the sustainability of our programmes. Under this model, we support national governments in establishing a steering committee called the Country Support Mechanism (CSM) in each partner country.

In Kenya, the CSM is chaired by the National Counter-Terrorism Centre (NCTC) and includes representatives of the Ministry of Interior, county government, donors and independent think tanks. This mechanism provides strategic direction to GCERF and the programmes we fund, ensuring accountability, results and alignment with national strategies.

To further embed local ownership, our grantees also seek to coordinate and effectively communicate with relevant government officials at the sub-national level, particularly within county governments.

GCERF'S INVESTMENT STRATEGY IN KENYA

GCERF's Investment Strategy was developed with stakeholders in Kenya and agreed upon by our Governing Board in 2023. It outlines a comprehensive approach to address the drivers of violent extremism and guides civil society organisations to design their programmes. The drivers behind VE are complex, but three of the most widely identified in Kenya are:

1. Youth unemployment
2. Perceived marginalisation
3. Relationship with security actors.

Over the last three years, one of the primary objectives of GCERF's investment has been to support the implementation of the NSPCVE at the county level, particularly through strengthening the coordination and capacity of County Engagement Forums.

*Partner countries are those in which GCERF funds civil society organisations to implement initiatives aimed at preventing violent extremism.

 A multi-stakeholder group comprising representatives from key sectors such as the security sector, civil service, criminal justice institutions, civil society organisations, faith-based organisations, peace committees, youth and women organisations, private sector, and active community members to facilitate the implementation of national strategy to prevent violent extremism.

STORY OF CHANGE

TVET PCVE CLUBS: YOUTH BECOMES A COMMUNITY BRIDGE

Joseph, a young man from Witu, a small town in Lamu county, spent his early life in a community with a high rate of unemployment. Joseph's participation in the Leadership and Advocacy Sensitisation for Technical and Vocational Education and Training (TVET) PCVE Clubs proved to be a turning point in his life. The workshop wasn't just about listening; it was about engaging, questioning, and envisioning a role for oneself beyond the constraints of the present, and through the workshop, he learned about leadership, not as a distant concept reserved for the few, but as a quality that could be nurtured within. He discovered advocacy, not as mere rhetoric but as a tool for tangible change, particularly in the realms of peace and security.

After attending the workshop, he saw potential not only in himself but also in his peers and felt an urgent need to bridge the gap between potential and reality in his community. As a first step, he gathered a group of friends to share what he had learned, using his own story as a testament to the power of positive engagement. The small group soon grew, and their meetings became a regular feature in Witu town, attracting the attention of both community leaders and local youth.

Seeing the enormous potential of youth as a force for peace, he began to work with local initiatives focused on PCVE. His advocacy work, based on a genuine belief in his community's capacity for change, began to resonate more widely. Joseph became a bridge, bringing together different stakeholders. Today, Joseph's impact is tangible. He has been instrumental in promoting youth engagement in peacebuilding and his efforts have steered his peers away from the path of extremism. Through workshops, peer mentoring and community projects, Joseph has ignited a collective spark of resilience and hope in Witu town.

Joseph's journey illustrates the profound impact of empowering young people with knowledge, skills and the belief that they can be positive change-makers and architects of their future.

GCERF'S VALUE PROPOSITION

GCERF'S UNIQUE MODEL OF INVESTMENT PRIORITISES:

Community-ownership and localisation: We invest in trusted grassroots civil society organisations that prioritise the needs and grievances of communities most affected by violent extremism. Many of these organisations have never received international funding before.

Sustainability: Our programmes involve all groups of society and strengthens trust between government, civil society and community members to build stronger, more resilient societies. This ensures that initiatives and structures continue to be relevant and effective.

Robust monitoring and evaluation processes: Our multi-layered monitoring and evaluation system, operating locally and globally, provides continuous feedback on programme effectiveness, identifies areas for improvement, and ensures objectives are consistently met.

Knowledge sharing: Our global network of civil society organisations working on PVE facilitates the exchange of good practices and lessons learned, fostering collaboration and enhancing the effectiveness of interventions. We also share our experiences through our participation in various conferences, publishing of articles and research papers in reputed journals to advance the understanding of PVE.

Capacity strengthening: We strengthen the capacity of civil society organisations to manage large-scale grants and implement effective initiatives, while also enhancing government capacity to develop comprehensive, holistic strategies to prevent violent extremism.
