Key Outputs

December 2020 – June 2024

Key achievements

September 2023 – June 2024

 In Albania and Kosovo, our partners have been using art therapy for returnees. The methodology uses the creative process of art to improve and enhance the physical, mental and emotional well being of children.	 Terre des Hommes Albania has facilitated the enrollment of two children in high school, providing them with necessary school supplies and educational materials. This support ensures that the students are fully equipped to participate in their studies, thereby enhancing their academic prospects and opportunities for development.	 The YouTube channel established by the CLWG serves as a platform to address pertinent issues concerning women's rights within the religious framework. This initiative enables the dissemination of progressive perspectives and facilitates discussions aimed at promoting gender equality within religious discourse.	 104 individuals at risk received direct assistance, psychosocial and mental health services, as well as counselling on economic empowerment. The economic empowerment initiatives are vital as they alleviate financial strain on the families, ensuring consistent access to essential services crucial for daily life.

“ The anonymous reporting website is available to the public and offers information to promote the info-call available to the public with violent extremism queries. Monthly content has been posted regularly according to the work plan. It used CLWG social media accounts to disseminate information and offer support on issues relevant to the prevention of radicalization and violent extremism. ”

Story of Change

Orsjola A. Miha, a psychologist at the "Kongresi i Manastirit" school, was one of the 15 participants in the IDM training program "Identification, Treatment, and Prevention of Radicalization and Violent Extremism in pre-university educational institutions," licensed by the Order of Psychologists in the Republic of Albania, with 4 credits. As a school psychologist, she emphasizes the importance of ongoing training to effectively manage new challenges, particularly in identifying early signs of violent extremism. She highlights the significance of endorsement from both the CVE Center and licensing institutions for such training programs, recognizing the value they add to psychologists' professional development in this field.

Effective management of cases involving children in need of protection requires the establishment of an integrated system, where all institutional components and civil society elements work together to develop and implement individualized protection plans. Empirical evidence from handling mothers and children returning from conflict zones highlights the importance of seamless integration between institutions and civil society entities.

Ms. Jonita Kabashi, Head of Sector at the Child Protection Unit in the Municipality of Tirana, emphasizes the significance of this collaborative approach, which is evident in specific cases and family units.

Terres Des Hommes: Amina's journey from a Syrian refugee camp to pursuing her passion for painting in Albania is a testament to resilience and determination. Despite the challenges she faced, including the loss of her father at a young age and the uncertainty of repatriating to Albania, Amina's story took a positive turn. Initially struggling with anxiety and insecurity stemming from her traumatic past, Amina found it difficult to envision a future that included education and integration into Albanian society. However, with the assistance of TDH's psychological services and GCERF's financial support, Amina and her siblings regained stability and hope for a brighter future.

Enrolling in high school and pursuing her passion for painting marked a significant turning point for Amina. Despite initial concerns about cultural norms and religious beliefs, Amina found the courage to embrace her talent and pursue her dreams, thanks to the support of her family, teachers, and the psychological services provided by TDH.

"If someone would have told me during the dark days of my life while living in one of the Syrian camps that today I would be studying painting, just like my peers, I would have said in very affirmative way: this cannot be my story."

What are Amina's expectations for her life with this new chapter, full of self-confidence and a desire to live?

"I imagine myself at the Academy of Arts in a few years. But above all, I am happy with the fact that my life has taken a new journey, and I will serve as a positive role model for my siblings. Who knows, maybe one of them will have a similar talent and can follow in my footsteps. The path has already been opened."

GCERF's Added Value

GCERF focuses on building institutional capacity e.g., CSOs, and government agencies.

GCERF invests in building a PVE-focused community of practice with CSOs, government agencies, and experts

Communities are at the forefront of project design and implementation, and the programme works with existing community structures for sustainability

All project design and implementation are done in coordination with nationally-aligned, locally-led programmes

GCERF connects CSOs, communities, and other stakeholders with government and security actors, leading to better coordination and relationships

GCERF's consortium model and capacity-building approach enables us to work in remote areas
